WEBINAR: THE OUTCOMES OF THE RIYADH CONSULTATIONS. WHAT'S NEXT?

In the beginning, Abu Al-Asrar spoke about the importance of the Riyadh consultations, which succeeded in bringing together the various Yemeni components and leaders, in pursuit of peace and security in Yemen. She added that she hoped that the consultations and the formation of a presidential council would be the beginning of lasting peace and the search for good governance. Abu Al-Asrar considered that the chances of success of Riyadh's outputs remain dependent on many factors, the most important of which is the implementation of the first and second Riyadh Agreement, especially the security file, as the government is required to support security stability in Aden and the liberated areas.

And she urged solving the southern issue at the earliest opportunity in light of the political, military, and security conditions conducive to the return of state institutions, unless the south is a temporary issue, according to her words!

MEETING WITH THE OFFICES OF THE US AND UN SPECIAL ENVOYS TO YEMEN

The Washington Center for Yemeni Studies team met with the Offices of the US and UN Special Envoys to Yemen. We discussed opening lines of communication and opportunities for collaboration between our teams and how the center can be part of any upcoming efforts and consultations. We presented one of our center's published pieces, "Towards a Sustainable Peace in Yemen," which summarizes the outcomes of an extensive workshop organized by WCYS in collaboration with Yemeni experts and researchers from various centers and NGOs to pave a pathway to peace in Yemen. Most importantly, we discussed the information most critical to the current work of the Envoys, which the center could allocate its resources toward research on said topics.
